Impact Story

NeoSmile Foundation conducted a soft skills training program for young cancer survivors who are part of the working youth. The participants found the session very informative and engaged actively throughout.

During the discussion, one young participant asked how to handle interviews, whether they should disclose their illness, as they did not want to be treated differently or given special consideration. A volunteer from NeoSmile Foundation encouraged him, explaining that sharing such information is a personal choice, but what truly matters is determination and commitment to building a career. In the end, it is one's hard work that speaks the loudest.

The young participant felt reassured and expressed gratitude to the volunteer. This moment showed how even a small dose of motivation can inspire hope and give strength to move forward in life.
